Dualism Between Physical And Human

In the philosophy of mind, mind-body dualism denotes either the view that mental phenomena are non-physical, or that the mind and body are distinct and separable. Thus, it encompasses a set of views about the relationship between mind and matter, as well as between subject and object, and is contrasted with other positions, such as physicalism and enactivism, in the mind-body problem.

Mind-body dualism, in its original and most radical formulation, the philosophical view that mind and body (or matter) are fundamentally distinct kinds of substances or natures. Thus, a mind-body (substance) dualist would oppose any theory that identifies mind with the brain, conceived as a physical mechanism.

Therefore, human geography basically deals with the symbiotic man-nature relationship, which is interdependent. Thus the spatial variation of physical and social phenomena is the hallmark of the study of geography. For the survival of geography, the dichotomy between physical and human geography should be eliminated.
